Army censures Kensinger for deception after soldier's death

WASHINGTON | The Army censured a retired three-star general Tuesday for a "perfect storm of mistakes, misjudgments and a failure of leadership" after the 2004 friendly-fire death in Afghanistan of Army Ranger Pat Tillman.

Army Secretary Pete Geren asked a military review panel to decide whether Lt. Gen. Philip Kensinger, who led Army special forces operations in Afghanistan after the Sept. 11 attacks, should also have his rank reduced.

In a stinging rebuke, Geren said Kensinger "failed to provide proper leadership to the soldiers under his administrative control" when the Army Ranger and former pro football star was killed in 2004.

Geren said that while Kensinger was "guilty of deception" in misleading investigators, there was no intentional Pentagon cover-up of circumstances surrounding Tillman's death — at first categorized by the military as being from enemy fire.

"He let his soldiers down," Geren said at a Pentagon news conference. Geren said he has directed a review panel of four-star generals to decide whether Kensinger, a three-star, should also have his rank reduced. If Kensinger is demoted to major general, his monthly retirement pay of $9,400 would be cut by about $900, according to Army officials. (AP)

Use What You Have, Steal What You Don't

It wasn't exactly "Mission: Impossible," but three burglars managed to break into grocery store by lowering themselves through a hole in the roof and then eluded the alarm system for two hours by crawling on their stomachs, police said. The thieves used a pickax to break open the hole in the roof of the Bi-Lo around 3 a.m. Friday, and climbed down a garden hose to the store's floor. The men then crawled around for two hours to avoid tripping the motion detectors. They tried unsuccessfully to break into the store safe. An alarm eventually went off, and they ran away with cartons of cigarettes and fistfuls of lottery tickets. The burglars have not yet been caught. (AP)

Squares Won't Stare At Bare in the Square

A church that went to court seeking to cover up the bare buttocks in an ad in New York City's Times Square will get its way. A deal has been struck to cover the bare backsides on a planned billboard advertising a bidet. The ad will instead show the models' legs and torsos, with their derrieres covered by the slogan for Toto, maker of the bidet. The billboard is on the building that houses the Times Square Church. The church went to court to stop the company from putting up a version that featured smiley faces on people's bare bottoms. (AP)

HONORS

Frank Signs On

Berlin has named a street in honor of Frank Zappa. In a letter of thanks, Zappa's brother, Bobby Zappa, said the Grammy-winning rocker, who died in 1993, would have been pleased. Frank-Zappa-Strasse — formerly Street 13 — lies on the eastern outskirts of Berlin amid empty industrial buildings in what was communist East Germany. The street is home to Orwo Haus, a former communist-era film factory that now provides practice studios for more than 160 bands. (AP)

Ways to Enrage The Dead, No. 78

The headstone for a teenager who died in a car wreck was repossessed after a $750 bill went unpaid. "That's just business," said Linda Anderson of Memorial Art Monument in Springville, Utah. "If we give every stone to everybody, we'd be out of business. They'd repossess your car if you didn't make payments." Brady Conger, 17, died when his car smashed into an SUV a year ago. Brady's classmates raised money to pay the bill, and the headstone will be installed again this week. (AP)

House Approves Ethics Legislation

Lawmakers pass bill that tightens rules on lobbying and gifts

WASHINGTON | The House voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to make lawmakers disclose more details of their efforts to fund pet projects and raise money from lobbyists, responding to a rash of recent scandals.

Senate leaders hope to give the bill final passage this week.

The legislation, which the House passed 411-8, would require lawmakers to disclose those lobbyists who raise $15,000 or more for them within a six-month period by "bundling" donations from many people.

Lawmakers would be barred from accepting gifts, including meals and tickets, from lobbyists and their clients.

Senators seeking targeted spending projects, or "earmarks," would have to publicize their plans 48 hours before the Senate votes on the proposals. They would have to certify that they and their families would not directly benefit financially.

The bill would also require former senators and top aides to wait two years before directly lobbying Congress.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., predicted the Senate will pass the bill this week, even though it requires 67 votes because it changes Senate rules.

The "landmark legislation" will combat the "culture of corruption developed in the last number of years here in Washington," Reid said. CHARLES BABINGTON (AP)

Sex Study Breaks With Stereotypes

Survey finds men, women have similar reasons for intimacy

WASHINGTON | After exhaustively compiling a list of the 237 reasons why people have sex, researchers found that young men and women get intimate for mostly the same motivations.

It is more about lust in the body than a love connection in the heart.

LET'S TALK ABOUT IT

→ Researchers formulated a sex questionnaire after asking 444 men and women to come up with a list of 237 distinct reasons people have sex. They ranged from "It's fun," which men ranked fourth and women ranked eighth, to "I wanted to give someone else a sexually transmitted disease," which ranked on the bottom by women.

U.S. college-aged men and women agree on their top reasons for having sex — they were attracted to the person, they wanted to experience physical pleasure and "it feels good," according to a peer-reviewed study in the August edition of Archives of Sexual Behavior. Twenty of the top 25 reasons given for having sex were the same for men and women.

Researchers at the University of Texas spent five years and their own money to study the overlooked

"why" behind sex while others were spending their time on the "how."

"It's refuted a lot of gender stereotypes ... that men only want sex for the physical pleasure and women want love," said University of Texas clinical psychology professor Cindy Meston, the study's co-author.

"The more we look, the more we find similarity," said Dr. Irwin Goldstein, director of sexual medicine at Alvarado Hospital in San Diego. Goldstein said the Texas research adds to growing evidence that the vaunted differences in the genders may only be among people with sexual problems. SETH BORENSTEIN (AP)

Roberts Leaves Hospital

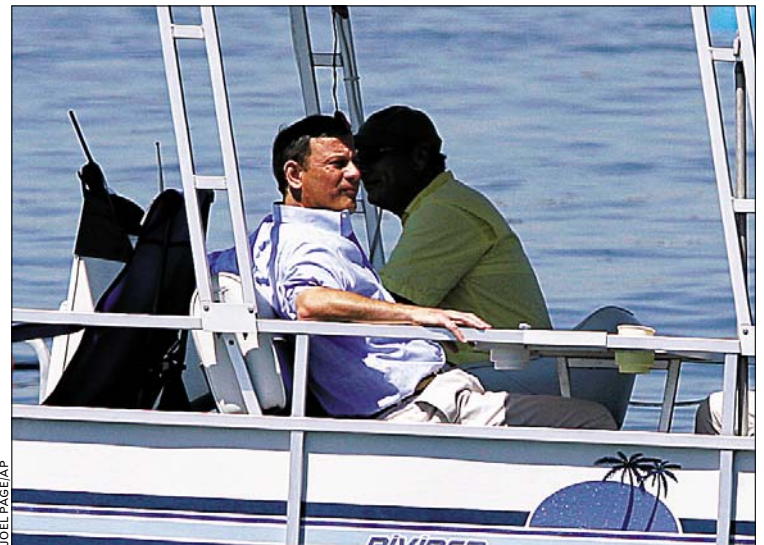

Chief justice says he feels fine after having a seizure on a dock

WASHINGTON | Waving and smiling, Chief Justice John Roberts walked briskly out of a hospital in Maine on Tuesday and resumed his vacation, returning to normalcy a day after he suffered his second seizure in 14 years.

The Supreme Court was mum about whether Roberts would need anti-seizure medication. But specialists say his doctor would have raised that possibility because someone who has had two seizures is at high risk of having another.

Roberts, 52, cheerfully waved to onlookers outside the Penobscot Bay Medical Center in Rockport, Maine, before heading by pontoon boat to his summer home on Hupper Island, off Maine's middle coast. Hours earlier, he had assured President Bush by phone that he felt fine.

ent reason. The court said doctors had found no tumor, stroke or any other explanation.

Officials would give no details about the chief justice's diagnosis or treatment.

The big question, left unanswered, is whether Roberts will take a daily pill to prevent another seizure.

Once someone has had two seizures, chances of a third can reach as high as 80 percent, said Dr. Gholam Motamedi, epilepsy director at Georgetown University Hospital.

Man Accused Of Ohio Mall Plot Pleads Guilty

COLUMBUS, OH. | A Somali immigrant the government says plotted to blow up an Ohio shopping mall pleaded guilty Tuesday to conspiring to provide material support to terrorists.

Nuradin Abdi, 35, was accused of plotting with a convicted al-Qaeda terrorist to blow up an unidentified mall the day after Thanksgiving 2003.

Abdi's guilty plea before U.S. District Judge Algenon Marbley came a week before the expected Aug. 6 start of his trial.

Prosecutors say Abdi gave stolen credit card numbers to a man accused of buying gear for al-Qaeda, and lied on immigration documents in order to visit a jihadist camp. (AP)

Joint Chiefs Nominee Sees Progress in Iraq

Mullen says security is improving, though political gains limited

WASHINGTON | President Bush's choice to head the military Joint Chiefs of Staff said Tuesday an increase of troops in Iraq is giving commanders the forces needed to improve security there.

"Security is better — not great, but better," said Navy Adm. Michael Mullen, speaking before the Senate Armed Services committee at his nomination hearing.

However, Mullen acknowledged under questioning that "there does not appear to be much political progress" in Iraq.

"I believe security is critical to providing the government of Iraq the breathing space it needs to work toward political national reconcili-

He said troop morale is still high, but he doesn't take for granted the service of U.S. troops.

"I worry about the toll this pace of operations is taking on them, our equipment and on our ability to respond to other crises and contingencies." KIMBERLY HEFLING (AP)

MIRAN SHAH, PAKISTAN

Militants Attack Army Post In Volatile Border Region

Army helicopter gunships and troops repelled a guerrilla raid on a military checkpoint Tuesday, killing at least 15 Islamic militants amid escalated fighting in Pakistan's tribal belt. Fury has surged among hard-liners against President Gen. Pervez Musharraf since the army raid on radicals at the pro-Taliban mosque left 102 people dead three weeks ago. Militants have since stepped up attacks, particularly at the northwestern frontier. The deteriorating security in Pakistan comes as Musharraf faces increasing criticism from Washington that the tribal regions, particularly Waziristan, have become a haven for al-Qaeda — which Pakistan denies. First Charges in Khmer Rouge Trial

Long-awaited tribunal indicts ex-prison chief of Cambodian regime

PHNOM PENH, CAMBODIA | A former schoolteacher who presided over a torture center was charged Tuesday with crimes against humanity, becoming the first top figure of Cambodia's notorious Khmer Rouge to be indicted for atrocities that led to an estimated 1.7 million deaths.

Duch, 62, also known as Kaing Guek Eav, headed the S-21 prison in Phnom Penh, a virtual slaughterhouse where about 16,000 suspected enemies of the regime were tortured before being taken out to what later became known as "killing fields" near the city.

During the Khmer Rouge's 1975-79 reign of terror, as many as one-fifth of the country's citizens died as a result of the radical policies of the group and its leader, Pol Pot.

But until this year, when personnel and facilities for a U.N.-backed genocide tribunal were finally in place, those responsible remained mostly at large, leaving the victims little hope of justice.

Duch, whose formal name also has been transliterated as Kaing Guek Iev, was one of five top Khmer Rouge figures whose indictments were recommended this month by prosecutors of the tribunal, which is a mixed body of Cambodian and international jurists. The judges have not yet released the names of the four others.

Duch supervised the brutal interrogations of those seen as enemies of the Khmer Rouge. His attention to detail and sense of duty meant S-21 kept meticulous records, which are likely to serve as key evidence in any trial. KER MUNTHIT (AP)

New U.N. Force OK'd For Darfur

Joint peacekeeping effort with AU would deploy by year's end

UNITED NATIONS | The U.N. Security Council approved a 26,000-strong peacekeeping force for Darfur on Tuesday to try to help end four years of fighting that has killed more than 200,000 people in the vast Sudanese region.

The force — the first joint peacekeeping mission by the African Union and the United Nations — will replace the beleaguered 7,000-strong AU force now in Darfur no later than Dec. 31.

U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon called it a "historic and unprecedented resolution" that will send "a clear and powerful signal" of the U.N.'s commitment to help to the people of Darfur and the surrounding region.

Sudan's U.N. ambassador, Abdalmahmood Abdalhaleem Mohamad, told reporters the government would discuss the resolution, which "contained many positive elements, and also it went to considerable extent to satisfy our concerns." EDITH M. LEDERER (AP)

U.S. Works to Reassure Arab Allies

Rice, Gates hold talks to relieve fears of a swift Iraq withdrawal

News Corp. board OKs $5B deal after bid wins more Bancroft support

NEW YORK | Rupert Murdoch edged closer to his goal of owning Wall Street Journal publisher Dow Jones & Co. as the board of his News Corp. media conglomerate signed off on the $5 billion deal, a person with knowledge of the matter said late Tuesday.

The board of Dow Jones & Co. was meeting Tuesday evening to give final consideration to the deal, but there was no word on a decision yet, and a company spokeswoman declined to comment.

If the bid succeeds, Murdoch will gain one of the great trophies of U.S. journalism and a newspaper that is considered required daily reading among the business and power elite.

The deal would also expand

Murdoch's already massive global media and entertainment empire News Corp., which owns the Fox broadcast network; Fox News Channel, the Twentieth Century Fox movie and TV studio; MySpace; newspapers in Australia and the U.K.; and several satellite TV broadcasters.

Mother's Bruises Examined

Ocean City woman changes story about origin of dead fetus

OCEAN CITY, MD. | Investigators trying to sort out a case of four dead fetuses found at a home turned their attention Tuesday to bruises found on the woman accused of stowing the dead fetuses.

Police say Christy Freeman, 37, was bruised on her legs, stomach and forearm when she was found bleeding Thursday. Freeman initially told police she was not pregnant, then changed her story to say she'd given birth to a deformed baby, which she called "gloopity glop."

A 26-week-old male fetus was found wrapped in a bloody towel under Freeman's bathroom sink. Freeman has been charged with murder under a Maryland law that allows murder prosecutions of people who cause the death of a fetus that may be able to survive outside the womb. Ocean City Police Chief Bernadette DiPino said investigators want to know what caused Freeman's bruises.

"We're going to bring in a domestic violence expert to determine, could it be self inflicted? Could it be from someone else? Could it have been an accident?" DiPino said. (AP)

Ex-Official Charged With Murder

Pr. George's County officer accused of unprovoked shooting

The former Prince George's County homeland security official who is accused of shooting two unarmed furniture deliverymen, one fatally, at his Accokeek home in January was indicted Tuesday on a dozen criminal charges, including second-degree murder and attempted second-degree murder.

Keith A. Washington, who is also a veteran county police officer, allegedly opened fire on Brandon D. Clark, 22, and Robert White, 36, with his police-issued 9mm Beretta on Jan. 24 in what he has maintained was self-defense. Clark died of his wounds.

White has said that Washington, 46, fired without provocation after a dispute over the Marlo bed set that he and Clark were delivering. The indictment suggests that the grand jury was not persuaded by Washington's claim that the movers assaulted him.

State's Attorney Glenn Ivey declined to discuss the prosecution's theory of how a furniture delivery led to a double shooting or to address why it took his office so long to secure an indictment. He declined to discuss the forensic evidence, saying he is barred from doing so, and offered no explanation for why the grand jury sided with White over Washington, a police officer of 17 years.

Michael Worthy, an attorney for Washington, expressed surprise at the indictment, saying he had been assured that physical evidence supported his client's version of events. Worthy said he was told that a report on gunfire residue and other forensic evidence indicated that Washington allegedly fired at close range, potentially supporting the notion that he was under attack.

"We believed that the police did an excellent job on the report, and we're surprised that the prosecutor charged him despite that evidence," Worthy said.

Superb engineering and an exotic design put the 2008 Audi R8 in the top tier of mid-engine supercars. The $115,000 R8 shows a change from rational to emotional.

Audi Hits A Homer

The R8 immediately jumps in line in the top tier of sports cars

ROAD TEST | No fewer than four Audi employees escorted the 2008 Audi R8 to the Los Angeles Times' garage, a veritable task force of handlers to introduce the company's new six-figure, mid-engine supercar. There were no gear-shifting paddles attached to the flat-bottomed steering wheel, no hydraulics to raise the front end as there are in the nose-grinding Lamborghini Murcielago, no wing-setting launch sequence as in the Bugatti Veyron. Just turn the key, drop the clutch and go. Like hell.

The Cavalli-suited entourage underscores the fact that the R8 is not about posting quick lap times or eating into the Porsche 911's market share. It's about Audi's image.

The R8 reflects a strategic pivot from rational to emotional. Instead of appealing to the reasoning centers of car buyers' brains, Audi has decided to split some freaking wigs and has pulled off a minor masterpiece: a supercar for grown-ups.

you most is the uncanny civility of the R8. In around-town driving, the R8 rides like an A8 sedan, or maybe a maglev train. I don't know what kind of dark matter the company uses to attach the suspension or the engine to the chassis, but the R8 has the best signal-to-noise ratio of any sports car on the market.

Inevitably, Audi will stick a monster motor in the R8, shoe it with enormous rubber and call it the R8 RS, or something like that. That's too bad. There aren't that many cars that come out of the box perfect. This is one. DAN NEIL (THE LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Bohemian China

The Great Wall and Peking duck are just part of the experience

PLANNING AHEAD | If you're planning a trip to Beijing for the 2008 Summer Olympics, but you fear you may tire of Olympic fever and flag-waving throngs, don't despair. Beijing has rich offerings when it comes to art, music, groovy boutiques and quiet temples.

Most of the capital city's guided tours are about awe and acquisition. Visitors are stunned into submission by the Forbidden City, the Great Wall of China and Tiananmen Square, then quickly shuttled to buying sprees at the Pearl Market or Silk Street.

The humbling grandeur of those imperial masterpieces is offset by the giddy empowerment of buying quality knockoffs of brands like Gucci, Marc Jacobs and Tiffany for a fraction of the usual cost. Few can resist the temptation. It is usually followed by a belly-busting Peking duck feast.

But this kind of Beijing experience is not for everybody, and there are a wealth of unique, low-cost alternatives.

Cui Jian, a lifelong Beijinger and China's most famous rock star, recommends you soak up the atmosphere in the 798 art district in the city's eastern Dashanzi neighborhood. The 1950s-era factory zone has been transformed into a bohemian oasis with galleries, cafes, bookstores, outdoor sculptures and graffiti splashed on old factory walls.

Red Sox Improve Strong Bullpen With Trade for Gagne

Eric Gagne's comeback has landed him a new role on a new team: helping the Red Sox close out the Yankees. Gagne, pitching like his old self following two elbow operations and back surgery, was acquired by Boston for the stretch run on Tuesday from the Texas Rangers, who also unloaded first baseman Mark Teixeira to Atlanta in a seven-player swap. Gagne waived the no-trade clause in his contract to join a Boston bullpen that already had two All-Star relievers: closer Jonathan Papelbon and setup man Hideki Okajima. (AP)

Tim Henman double-faulted on match point in a third-set tiebreaker, handing American John Isner a 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (4) win on Tuesday in the first round of the Legg Mason Tennis Classic. Isner, playing in just his second ATP tour event, used a serve that routinely topped 130 mph to beat the tournament's 2003 champion. "I might have caught him on an off day," said Isner. (AP)

Redskins, Samuels Can Breathe Easy

Injured star tackle will likely return in time for the regular season

REDSKINS | Three years ago, the Washington Redskins season began their downward spiral when one of the pillars of their offensive line ruptured an Achilles' tendon during the preseason.

Late Monday afternoon, for a heart-stopping minute or two, the Redskins thought they were reliving that nightmare. This time it was the left tackle Chris Samuels instead of the right tackle Jon Jansen — and it was a practice instead of a game — but the scene was familiar: players huddled in hushed silence around the fallen teammate, thinking the worst.

"You don't know what to think when you see a player laying on the field like that," assistant coach Joe Bugel said Tuesday. "You could hear a pin drop. Any player who goes down — but especially when you lose a Pro Bowl player like that. Those are the kind of guys you can't afford to lose."

An MRI revealed a grade-2 sprain of the MCL. Translated in English, that means a sigh of relief. Samuels is expected to miss up to four weeks — probably the entire preseason — but is expected to

ELITE EIGHT

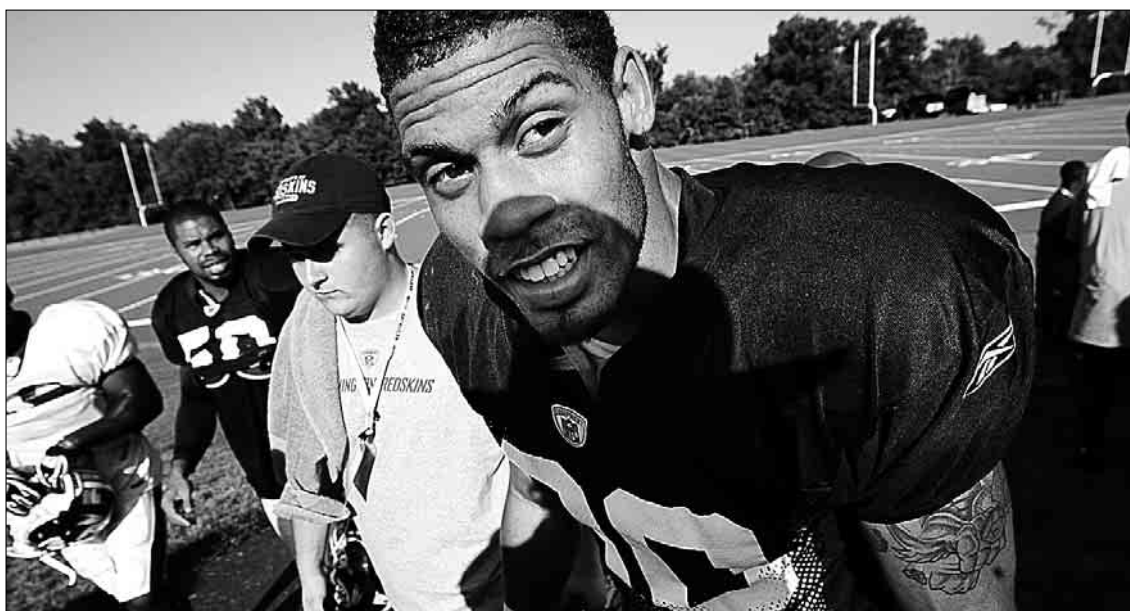

Including Samuels, the Redskins have eight linemen in camp with at least four years of experience:

- Samuels has made the Pro Bowl in four of his seven seasons.
- Jon Jansen has been on the Redskins' line since 1999.
- Casey Rabach started all 16 games at center last season.
- Randy Thomas teamed with Jansen on the right side in '06.
- Mike Pucillo backed up Rabach last year, but could move to guard.
- Jason Fabini has started 114 games in nine seasons.
- Six-year vet Todd Wade has backed up Jansen last season.
- Ross Tucker has played both guard and center in the NFL.

return in time for the regular season opener Sept. 9, although that timetable is far from set in stone given the unpredictable nature of injury rehabilitation.

The injury is a reminder of the precarious nature of the game. Even if Samuels returns on time, will the knee nag the him all season, altering his technique and quickness as he attempts to keep pass rushers from hitting quarterback Jason Campbell in the back? Players playing hurt is a reason often cited for last year's 5-11 season, when several key defensive players were hindered by various ailments.

"We really got good news," coach Joe Gibbs said. "Hopefully, Chris will be back before four weeks are up." JOSEPH WHITE (AP) LaRon Landry said the change of pace from college to the NFL "was pretty hard" after his first day of Redskins training camp.

Landry Has Some Catching Up to Do

Much-heralded safety finally starts camp after signing contract

REDSKINS | Last month, LaRon Landry missed minicamp because of a paintball injury. Then, he missed the first four days of training camp this month because he had yet to sign a contract.

On Tuesday, the No. 6 overall draft pick was finally on the field again, having signed a five-year deal worth about $41.5 million, including roughly $17 million guaranteed.

"I've got a lot of catching up to do," Landry said. "I've got a lot of hard work to do."

Landry is expected to form a fearsome tandem with Sean Taylor — once he's earned the starting job. He worked mainly with the backups on Tuesday, although he did run some plays alongside Taylor.

"Good to have him here," coach

Joe Gibbs said. "But it's hard to get an impression on one practice."

Landry didn't have much to say after the workout. He said he had been pushing his agent to get a deal done, and that he hasn't decided how he'll spend his newfound riches. He said he has been working out at LSU, but that didn't prepare him for the hard work of his first day.

"The change of pace was pretty hard," Landry said. "As practice went on, I got into it." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Kevin Garnett makes the Celtics instant contenders in the mediocre East.

Celtics Exchange 7 for Garnett

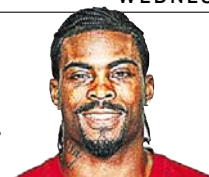

NBA | Kevin Garnett gives Boston a new Big Three that brings the Celtics much closer to what their old Big Three delivered — an NBA title.

The Celtics, who have 16 championships but have gone without one for more than two decades, obtained the 10-time All-Star in a 7-for-1 deal — the biggest trade for one player.

Boston sent the Minnesota Timberwolves forwards Al Jefferson, Ryan Gomes and Gerald Green, guard Sebastian Telfair and center Theo Ratliff, two first-round draft picks and cash considerations.

With Paul Pierce and Ray Allen already on the roster, the Celtics have been transformed from a promising collection of youngsters who had the NBA's second-worst record into an instant contender in the mediocre Eastern Conference. (AP)

ABANDON VICK: The sports goods company Rawling said Tuesday it was ending its relationship with Michael Vick because of dogfighting conspiracy charges. Nats Stand Pat at Trading Deadline

For the 2nd straight year, team surprises everyone with nothing

NATIONALS | Shortly after the major league non-waiver trade deadline passed Tuesday with no deals by the Washington Nationals, closer Chad Cordero sat in the home dugout at RFK Stadium in his blue warmup jersey and smiled.

"It feels really good to be able to stay here and hopefully see that new stadium next year," Cordero said. "I heard they were asking too much. That made me feel a lot better — it meant the chances of me going were very slim."

Cordero, 1-2 with 21 saves and a 2.65 ERA this season, and setup man Jon Rauch were thought to be the players most likely to depart Washington before the annual deadline to make deals without having to pass players through waivers.

Instead, those two righty relievers — and everyone else — stuck around.

Jim Bowden, center, said the Nationals came close to making two trades Tuesday.

"We explored every possibility we could to help our club long term, and at the end of the day, we did nothing," general manager Jim Bowden said.

He said the Nationals came close to making two trades, but one was scrapped because the GM didn't want to part with minor league prospects, and the other was a three-team proposal that fell through.

Ten days ago, Dmitri Young and Ronnie Belliard were also thought

AROUND THE LEAGUE

Not everyone stayed quiet as the trade deadline came and went. Here's a look at the key trades.

→ As expected, the Braves finalized a seven-player deal for slugger Mark Teixeira and reliever Ron Mahay. Atlanta sent rookie catcher Jarrod Saltalamacchia and three prospects to Texas.

→ Texas also dealt closer Eric Gagne to Boston for lefty Kason Gabbard and two prospects.

→ The Yankees added pop at the plate when they traded for the Dodgers' Wilson Betemit, giving up reliever Scott Proctor.

→ The Padres made three trades on Tuesday, getting infielder Morgan Ensberg from Houston, utility man Rob Mackowiak from the White Sox and reliever Wilfredo Ledezma from Atlanta.

→ The Pirates were surprise buyers, getting pitcher Matt Morris from the Giants for rookie outfielder Rajai Davis.

to be on the market, but both wound up signing two-year extensions over the last week.

So, the Nationals wind up in a situation similar to last year: a last-place team expected to be a seller in the trade market that holds onto its players. In 2006, it was slugging outfielder Alfonso Soriano who Washington kept instead of dealing at the deadline.

He left as a free agent in the offseason, signing with the Chicago Cubs, while the Nationals got two draft picks as compensation.

"We like them both a lot," Bowden said of Cordero and Rauch. "We don't want to trade them, unless you're getting pieces that help us win a championship in a few years. They're not free agents. We didn't have to trade anybody."

United Seeks Out Even More Work

D.C. would advance to the SuperLiga semis with a win at Houston

UNITED | The reward for victory Wednesday night in Houston, in what will be D.C. United's fourth match in 11 days, will be yet another game, crammed into an already crowded schedule in two weeks.

While that may not seem like much of a prize, especially to a United team struggling to find its form, the players' demeanor following their first two SuperLiga matches suggests they'd be willing to make room for a semifinal.

A well-crafted 1-0 victory over Mexican power Club América last weekend has lifted D.C. (1-0-1) into a tie with Houston atop Group B.

United tied Morelia in its first match of the SuperLiga. It also beat Club América.

The first- and second-place teams will advance to the semis, meaning Mexico's Morelia (0-0-2) still could progress with a win over América (0-2-0) Wednesday night in Chicago.

United has failed to win at Houston in two tries, but Jaime Moreno (injured hamstring), who's played for D.C. just once in the past seven weeks, will be traveling to Texas. BRIAN STRAUS has an ERA of 9.23. So, the Red Sox should be happy they're playing him in hitter-friendly Fenway Park.

BASEBALL (7 P.M. ON WGN, 8 P.M. ON ESPN AND 10 P.M. ON ESPN2) First, the Yankees host the White Sox as the Mets travel to Milwaukee. Then, fans can stay up late to watch Barry Bonds likely sit on the bench.

Detective Comic

A cartoonist works to make sure a lost artist is recognized

ENIGMA | Like any fledgling industry, the pioneer days of comic books were filled with successes, failures and mysteries. For every success, like Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster's Superman, there are countless other cartoonists who contributed works that were equally important, though their names fell through the cracks of history.

Fletcher Hanks was one of them. While cartoonists like Siegel and Shuster, Will Eisner and Bob Kane continued to work for decades, Hanks' career ended as abruptly as it began. He worked from 1939 to 1941 and then simply disappeared from the scene.

Thanks to Paul Karasik, a one-time editor of the influential "Raw" magazine, the Hanks name has returned to the annals of comic book lore. Karasik culled a collection of Hanks' work, "I Shall Destroy All the Civilized Planets: The Comics of Fletcher Hanks." The book reprints 15 of his best works and includes an original comic by Karasik that addresses many of the mysteries surrounding the enigmatic cartoonist.

"We started calling Fletcher

REVIVAL: Paul Karasik believed that Fletcher Hanks, a mysterious artist of the 1940s, is one of the great cartoonists of all time. Karasik shares Hanks' work in a book, "I Shall Destroy All the Civilized Planets: The Comics of Fletcher Hanks."

Hanks the Ed Wood of comics," said Karasik, who will be appearing at Politics and Prose on Wednesday. "It's a good golden key to unlock a neophyte reader's mind to what they might encounter. Like Ed Wood, Fletcher Hanks is a significant artist whose work was overlooked not only in his lifetime, but also by several subsequent generations."

Karasik points out several things that make Hanks unique among his peers. Most notably, he was the first comic book auteur — he created his comics from soup to nuts. His contemporaries, while skilled, worked on a production line system.

Looking at the work itself, there is one other notable aspect. Likely fueled by his minister dad, his comics feature stories in which "the flaming swift sword of justice comes crashing down on the villains," Karasik said.

"These guys don't just end up in jail," he said. "They get transformed into bugs, turned into rats, frozen for eternity to contemplate their crimes. The combination of this striking graphic quality and this brutal sense of justice is unlike anything else in the early days of comics, or in comics period."

Michelangelo Antonioni was central to the art-house cinema of the 1960s.

Maestro of Modernism

Award-winning Italian director Michelangelo Antonioni dies at 94

GIANT | Michelangelo Antonioni, the Italian director who explored alienation in modern society in movies including "Blow-Up" and "L'Avventura," died Monday evening, officials said. He was 94.

Antonioni's trademark style of sparse dialogue, long takes and a slow-moving camera made him a leading figure in art-house cinema in the 1960s. Along with Federico Fellini, he helped turn post-war Italian film away from the Neorealism movement and toward a personal cinema of imagination.

"He was an acute observer of the malaise of the 1900s, in all its expressions," said Italy's Culture Minister Francesco Rutelli.

Antonioni died on the same day as Swedish director Ingmar Bergman, leaving cinema without two of its most significant personalities.

Antonioni's career spanned six decades, about 25 films and several screenplays.

In 1995, Hollywood honored his career with an Oscar for lifetime achievement. By then, Antonioni was a physically frail but mentally sharp 82-year-old.

His slow-moving camera never became synonymous with box-office success, but movies like "Blow-Up," "Red Desert" and "The Passenger" reached enduring fame.

GREGORY SCAFFIDI

HARDCORE SENSITIVE: Common's new album, "Finding Forever," combines his intellect and bad-boy roots with the overly soft tone of his last album, "Be."

Finding Common Ground

The rapper with two distinct styles has married them happily

MUSIC | Throughout his career, Chicago rapper Common has struggled with being too earnest for his own good. Even on 2005's "Be," a tightly wound nugget of overly sentimental love ditties and deft street realism, Common seemed too smitten by his own sensitive guy schtick.

But on "Finding Forever," he's struck a better balance between his harder b-boy essence and his touchy-feely inner soul. Once again, Kanye West supplies the bulk of the beats. Accented with the odd sample and bolstered by neo-soul singers, they manage to give Common's warm delivery the adequate punch and cutting edge it needs to avoid sounding wimpy. As the sinewy keys move through "The People," Common's boasts are hopeful yet not cheesy: "My raps ignite the crowd like Obama." And on the J Dilla-produced "So Far to Go," featuring a long-lost D'Angelo, Common's full of slick come-ons: "Sweetheart, you know you're the most important at least on the West coast."

He's struck a better balance between his b-boy essence and his touchy-feely inner soul.

And even when Common can't resist moralizing about skewed virtues ("Drivin' Me Wwild" with Lily Allen) or black authenticity ("U, Black Maybe" with Bilal), he comes off as insightful, not didactic. With "Finding Forever," Common's well on his way to perfecting that sublime antidote to thug rap's limited vision. BRETT JOHNSON (AP)

Racial Harmony

Diverse label Stax Records made music through turbulence

WAVES | The "Great Performance" presentation "Respect Yourself: The Stax Records Story" (9 p.m., PBS) offers a parable of musical triumph overshadowed by tragedies of the personal, political and financial sort. It's a tale of talent, race and opportunity.

A humble Memphis record company founded in the late 1950s, Stax would discover and record some of the greatest names in R&B, soul and funk, including Otis Redding, Isaac Hayes, the Staples GREAT TALENT: Isaac Hayes was one of many big names discovered by Stax.

Singers and Wilson Pickett. Black and white musicians played, ate and recorded together and considered the Stax family an oasis in troubled times.

But their optimism was mixed with a dangerous naivete. Only after a triumphant tour of Europe did many Stax artists consider themselves stars anywhere outside of Memphis. Then, in short order, Redding was killed in a plane crash. In 1968, the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. shattered the company's aura of racial harmony.

The record label would rebound and resurge in the early 1970s. But another botched deal with a major record label and a change in banking policies would put Stax in a fatal financial bind. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

The Caribbean is losing its status as a premiere destination

The turquoise waters and white-sand beaches of the Caribbean appear to be losing some of their allure for U.S. tourists.

Americans who flocked to the islands in record numbers until recently are finding new destinations or staying home, leading to declines of more than 10 percent this year in islands including Jamaica, St. Lucia and Grenada.

Governments have aimed marketing pitches at Canada and Europe to compensate for slippage in the American market, which accounts for about 60 percent of the region's vital tourism business.

"The trickle-down effect is huge," said Richard Kahn, a spokesman for the Caribbean Tourism Organization. "In the long run, this could mean the loss of jobs throughout the Caribbean."

A new passport rule has discouraged some travelers. Americans returning by air from the Caribbean were required to present the document beginning earlier this year, although the U.S. is temporarily accepting proof of application because of a backlog.

But even U.S. territories unaffected by the new security measure have seen declines — the number of Americans visiting Puerto Rico dropped 9 percent in January compared with the same month last year, and the U.S. Virgin Islands experienced a 7 percent drop.

Some simply want more exotic destinations.

"A lot of the larger islands are reaching that point where their market has been there, done that and is looking for a different experience," said Cheryl Carter, a tourism instructor at Florida International University.

Ken Zapanta, a 30-year-old Californian, said he and his wife enjoyed their visit to Barbados two years ago but they cannot justify another Caribbean trip.

"Once was enough," he said. "The beaches, you can get that anywhere."

The number of American visitors dipped in the months after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks before surging more than 10 percent over four years. Last year, U.S. tourists staying overnight reached a peak of 11.5 million, according to statistics from the Barbados-based CTO.

Terrorism fears boosted the Caribbean's appeal as a safe, nearby destination, said Joe Goldblatt, senior lecturer at Temple University's School of Tourism and Hospitality Management. Over time, more U.S. tourists began visiting distant continents.

FROM EXOTIC TO PASSÉ: The turquoise waters of the Caribbean appear to be losing some of their allure for U.S. tourists.

Deserted Isles

CHERYL CARTER, TOURISM PROFESSOR

Facing uncertainty about when trends might reverse, Caribbean officials are focusing promotional efforts elsewhere.

Jamaica, hit by a 12 percent drop in American visitors this year, has started advertising more in Canada and Europe, said Basil Smith, Jamaica's tourism director.

Foreign tourists take a stroll along Isla Verde Beach in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

A strong euro helped boost European visits by 22 percent through April, he said.

The "spice island" of Grenada arranged for the German airline Condor to offer weekly service year-round instead of only in the winter, said tourism board spokesman Edwin Frank. St. Lucia is negotiating with British Airways and Virgin Atlantic Airways to provide more flights.

Some analysts argue U.S. tourism will rebound quickly, attributing the recent decline in part to a sluggish U.S. housing market that has cut into Americans' spending.

But others fear the new passport requirement could haunt Caribbean resorts for years.

"Once an American has now got a passport, the world is their market," said Alec Sanguinetti, chief executive of the Caribbean Hotel Association. "They can go anywhere." DANICA COTO (AP)

Long Shot to Hit Mars

Science

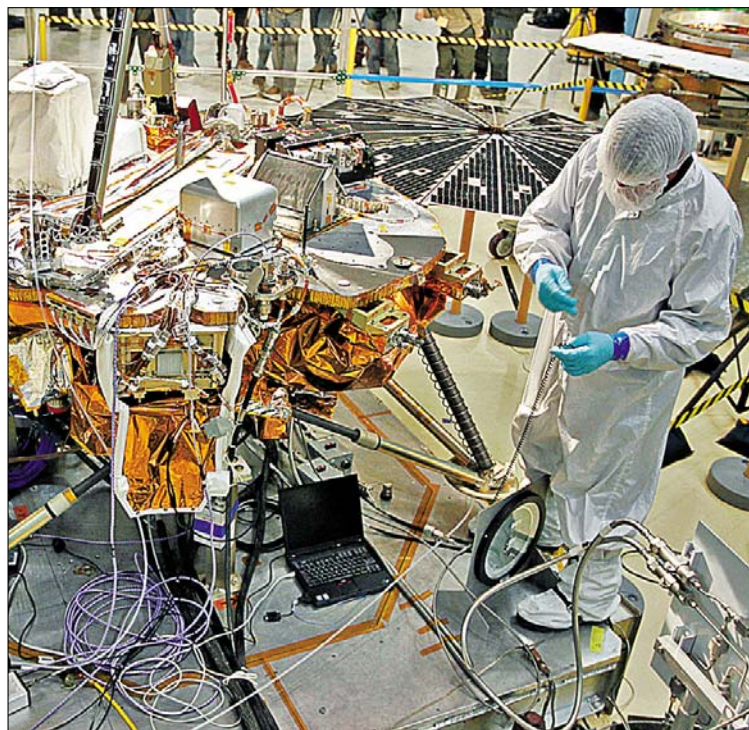

NASA's Phoenix craft will dig trenches in a trip to the Red Planet

A three-legged NASA spacecraft with a long arm for digging trenches is headed to the Martian north pole to see whether the environment there is favorable for primitive life.

But before it can start its work, the Phoenix Mars Lander must survive landing on the surface of the rocky Red Planet, which has a reputation of swallowing man-made probes. Of the 15 global attempts to land spacecraft on Mars, only five have made it.

"Mars has the tendency to throw you curveballs," said Doug McCuiston, who heads the Mars program at NASA headquarters.

Phoenix — which was pieced together from old hardware that was shelved after two embarrassing Mars failures in 1999 — will blast off from Cape Canaveral, Fla.,

aboard a Delta II rocket on a 423-million-mile trip. The three-week window for launching the craft begins on Aug. 3.

Although Phoenix lacks the tools to detect past or current life, scientists hope it will shed light on whether the northern arctic possesses the signature ingredients for microbes to exist.

Of the 15 global attempts to land spacecraft on Mars, only five have made it.

The lander should arrive at Mars 10 months after it launches and touch down in the northern plains for its three-month mission. If successful, it will be the first time since the Viking missions three decades ago that a robot will drill beneath the Martian surface.

There is no water on the arid Martian surface today, but Phoenix's job is to find out whether the underground ice may have melted, creating a wetter environment. Scientists generally agree that water, along with the presence of organic materials and a stable heat source, is needed to support life.

To prevent Phoenix from accidentally bringing organisms to Mars, technicians had to take special care while prepping the lander for launch. It underwent dry heat treatment and precision cleaning to reduce the amount of germs on its surface.

Phoenix is the first project from NASA's Scout program, a low-cost complement to pricier Mars missions in orbit and on the surface. Managed by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Phoenix cost $420 million compared to the hardy rovers Spirit and Opportunity, which cost $820 million to launch in 2003.

True to its name, Phoenix rose from the ashes of previous missions. It was supposed to fly in 2001 as a sidekick to the Mars Odyssey orbiter. The orbiter reached Mars, but the lander mission was canceled in the wake of back-to-back losses in 1999.

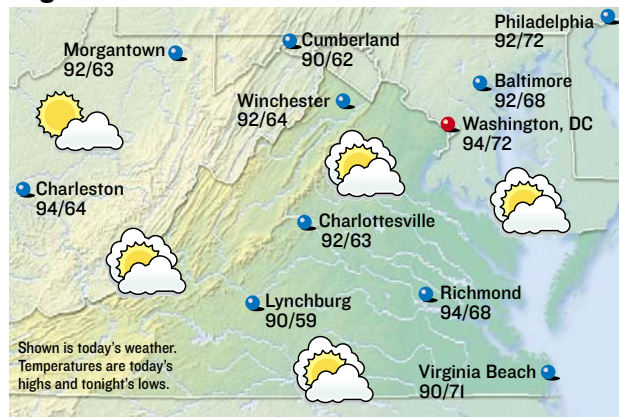

Phoenix carries several science instruments similar to ones that flew on the ill-fated Polar Lander mission. Engineers rigorously tested the spacecraft over the last four years "to drive out any of the problems we might have in the system," said Barry Goldstein, project manager at JPL.

If Phoenix survives its primary mission, it will turn into a weather station and collect data on the atmosphere. ALICIA CHANG (AP)

Step back to school with new kids' shoes

The silver lining for children who aren't happy that a new year of school is just around the corner is that new stuff — clothes, accessories and supplies — is likely to come with it.

And if these kids are anything like their mothers, one of the highlights will be new shoes.

But we ask more of school shoes than summer's flip-flops or sandals: School shoes need to be multitaskers. They need to be cool enough so kids will want to wear them. They need to fit well so they'll be comfortable and last during a busy day, and they need to offer value to win over parents who foot the bill.

"School shoes are shoes that go with a lot of outfits," says Celeste Risimini-Johnson, who is overseeing the Children's Place expansion of its shoe collection this fall. "They need to be versatile. Kids tend to gravitate to the most comfortable shoe and wear it every day."

Dark colors play into the durability factor, Risimini-Johnson says. "We will offer pink, but the darker colors are more popular. Mom doesn't want to have to buy new shoes in a month because they look trashed."

One of her favorites of the season is a black leather boot with pink rhinestone buckles that she thinks will pass both the parent and kid tests. "It's real leather and has that stretch comfort factor. It also comes in camouflage, which also is hot, but the pink rhinestones makes it really girly and stylish."

At Stride Rite, one of the key fall trends is mixing textures, such as suede, patent leather and metallics, says Rachel Panetta, marketing manager at Stride Rite. "Patent leather is no longer for a dress shoe anymore. It's used to accent sneakers and for casual shoes."

There's been a recent evolution in boys' shoes, too, moving from a dressier shoe to a Euro-influenced oxford, also with a sportier bottom and contrast stitching, Murray says. The shoes are mostly black and brown, but there are hints of gray, red and orange. "It's a shoe that spans a few categories. It can be casual, sporty, but not as casual as a sneaker."

For younger children, alternative closures — "magic tape" (known as the trademarked Velcro to most of us), Z-strap closures and slip-ons with elastic gores — are a key element of back-to-school shoes, according to Murray. The kids can put their shoes on and take them off themselves, something they consider an accomplishment and a godsend to any parent who has several children do get out the door in the morning.

To increasingly fashion-conscious children, however, it's all about the style.

"What we find talking to kids is that if it doesn't have the right look, it won't 'fit' no matter how well it fits," Murray says.

Blushing Pride

Mom always said we had a flair for the dramatic, so we really wanted to start this review of the new KIMIKO LIFTING PUFF BLUSH ($38, kimikobeauty.com) by screaming "LIES, ALL LIES." But that's not the case. The blush, which you apply by pounding the puff into your face, releasing the powder contained below, does not, in fact, "lift skin," which is an absurd claim. But what it does do is give cheeks an exceptionally nice wash of color. There is a bit of glimmer included, which can make skin reflect light and look younger, but glitterphobes may find it a bit much.

The Tonifying Shampoo made locks bright and shiny by stripping them of mineral deposits. The Bodifying Conditioner did nothing for detangling, but did add strength and volume. Coupled with the grassy spring scent, this de-aging duo left hair weightless and whipper-snappy. JEN BEASLEY (EXPRESS)

Paul Farhi

Post staff writer PAUL FARHI was online Tuesday and discussed the Murdoch/Wall Street Journal deal and multiple celebrity deaths, and entertained a suggestion to replace Paula Zahn with someone other than Campbell Brown.

I'm curious to see whether the WSJ writers who appear there will continue to do so after the launch of the Fox business channel. Or, will that channel suddenly boast a level of credibility that would be hard to build from the ground up?

You touch on something that I think has been largely ignored in the Murdoch-WSJ saga. Murdoch has announced that he's starting a competitor to CNBC. Which do you think sounds better and might be more lucrative: the Fox Business Channel or the Dow Jones/Wall Street Journal Channel? I'd go with the latter. That's what Rupe's primarily been after all along.

Can you think of a recent time when we had more celebrity deaths in one day?

Yes, quite a cluster. The thing about Bergman and Antonioni: I never could understand the dialogue in any of their movies. Their actors spoke the worst English ever.

Since CNN just proved by firing Paula Zahn that any woman south of 40 has no value to them, and since they relentlessly cover 20-something celebs in legal trouble — kill two birds with one stone and hire Lindsay Lohan instead of Campbell Brown!

Well, let's try to put the Zahn firing in perspective. She wasn't doing so hot at 8 p.m. Then again, she doesn't exactly look “old” (she's 51). Plus, I don't know what Campbell Brown (who's 38 or 39) is going to do that Paula wasn't/couldn't.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) This is a good day to experiment with a new idea or way of life — if only in a small way at first. You needn't make any dramatic changes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can learn from those around you. Watch what others do in tense situations. Put yourself in their shoes: What would you do?

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) It may seem premature to choose to do one thing over all others, but you feel ready to make just such a commitment. Still, why rush?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) There's no reason for you to continue going through life with a heavy heart at this time. Give yourself more credit, and break negative habits now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) A loved one may be demanding more from you than you are able to give right now. This doesn't mean, of course, that you must go your separate ways.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A cry for help must not go unanswered; do what you can to make things better — for yourself, for those around you, for everyone.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You're very likely in for a full day, so you'll want to get started in a manner that invites success, not failure. Focus on inner rhythms.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may be feeling somewhat insecure at this time, but an encounter with someone very much like yourself has you feeling more confident very soon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have the opportunity to learn a great deal about something that has always fascinated you. You'll be able to collect a great deal of information.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Traveling from one place to the next may be easier than expected — in some ways. In others, it may be more difficult, but you can solve problems.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's no reason to think you can't have anything you want — provided you get the right kind of start early on. Don't hesitate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You should be able to raise the stakes quite dramatically. Those with less on the line will eventually drop out of the race.

Let Doctors Pick Treatment

DIABETES PATIENTS WON an important battle when the government panel said Avandia should remain on the market ("Panel: Keep Selling Diabetes Drug," July 31). The decision of whether to use this particular drug should be made by the doctor and patient. It is impossible for the FDA to know the specifics of each patient's status, so it should not be the FDA's job to determine which treatment plan is best.
